

Making Friends With Food

Do you feel despair with your struggle to manage your weight? Do you experience anxiety, mood swings, irritability, or a persistent mental fogginess? Would you like to learn how what you eat affects cholesterol, blood pressure, diabetes, allergies, ADD, and many other physical ailments? Would you like to discover how the way you eat can create craving and obsession that harms your physical, emotional, and mental wellbeing?

Gain the knowledge and experience you need to break through destructive patterns and find new ways to eat that enhance your overall health. Our food and health course teaches you how to disrupt unhealthy patterns with food and how to create a life-long way of healthy eating.

“As a former nutrition major, I found myself doing everything I learned not to do. The Food and Health workshop showed me the addictive patterns I’d developed with food. Since completing the course I’ve reached and maintained a healthy weight, no longer have mood swings or anxiety, and I’ve completed two marathons and many half-marathons. I’ve also re-established an exercise program that contributes to my overall wellbeing. I sleep well, feel better, and have plenty of energy.” Aimee T. non-profit executive.

The co-owners and associates of DTP-Leadership Group incorporate the work of Kay Shepherd to provide you with an informative, creative, and effective program based on 30 years of experience.

After this course you will be able to:

- Identify reactive ingredients in food products and understand how they affect you
- Eliminate diet thinking and establish a commitment to a different way of eating, thinking about, and relating to food
- Shop for food, prepare food, and eat away from home and while traveling to maintain a healthy food plan
- Establish a healthy food plan for your household
- Appreciate the value of recovery programs related to food addiction
- Process feelings so you aren’t triggered into thinking and behaving in ways that cause unhealthy eating
- How to apply what you’ve learned to continue make healthy food choices
